Chief Engineer Peter Vandenburgh who had hurried below to see whether the Charise boat was punctured below the water ne, reported that there was no danger. The eight foot overhang had saved the Brennan. Capt. McCarthy hurried over to sioner Hebberd and announced that there was no danger.
"There's no danger!" cried the Comioner at the top of his lungs when he got this report.

More than half the 250 passengers on the Brennan were on the second deck, and as they could see that the Maraval had not suffered much from the collision many of them took their half adjusted preservers and stepped down about two feet onto the deck of the Maraval. A dozen men who noticed that the women were panicky and were insisting on leaving the Brennan stood over the stem of the Maraval and helped them down. Capt. Scott of the Maraval stood at his prow and calmed the women all he could. Several reporters boarded the Maraval from the ennan to interview him on the spot, but they didn't get the interview. Capt. Thomas McAvoy, admiral of the Charities Department t fleet, and Gavin Hamilton, chief engineer of the department's boats, were both on the Brennan and took charge were both on the Breuman and was at its height.

Responding to the distress signals, the Fidelity backed up alongside the Maraval and prepared to take off the lost passengers from the Brennan. The boy band was playing "Colleen Bawn" and kept right at it. Many of its members are feeble minded. The steam derrick Florence and the tug C. N. Kimpland got alongside the two steamers and the revenue cutter Calumet also came up, but the Fidelity took off all the passengers who were left on the Maraval. The Fidelity arrived at Pier A first and unloaded her passengers at about 7 o'clock.

unloaded her passengers at about 7 o'clock.
The Thomas S. Brennan came up right behind her. Many persons were still wearing life preservers when they got off at the Battery.

The new steamer Lowell will be completed in about three months. She is to be ighted by electricity and heated by steam, and among her features are a space per-mitting ambulances to be driven aboard, an upper deck cabin arranged for sick patients and rooms for doctors and nurses.

MEMORIAL TO LINCOLN.

Bill Appropriating $5,000,000 Reported Favorably to the House.

WASHINGTON, May 25 .- Details of the scheme to extend the Capitol grounds to the new railway station and to erect a monumental memorial to Lincoln which shall artistically and topographically balance the Washington Monument at the western end of the city are set forth in a favorable report on a bill appropriating $5,000,000 made to the House of Representatives to-day by Mr. McCall, chairman of the Committee on Library. The report says the purpose of the bill is to take the land from the Senate office building westward to New Jersey avenue and northward to Massachusetts avenue, on which the station fronts. The area of the enlargement is forty-eight acres greater than that of the Capitol grounds at present, "the dignity and impressiveness of which it will greatly augment."

The purchase of the land is committed to the Vice-President, Speaker and Super-intendent of the Capitol, and $4,000,000 are appropriated to pay for it and to grade and lay it out. A commission is also provided for to place upon some suitable point a monument or memorial to Abraham Lincoln, for which an additional million is coln, for which an additional million is appropriated.

"There should be," the report concludes, "a monument to Lincoln in its way as noble and impressive as the monument to Washington. They are the two great figures in American history. If the memorial to Lincoln were placed in the part of the city where the monument to Washington is located it would destroy the monumental balance of the city. What more fitting place could there be for a monument to Lincoln than upon this proposed extension of the Capitol grounds, fronting the gateway of the nation to its capital city?"

HOUSE HAS PROLONGED SESSION. Passes Bill Appropriating $4,000,000 to Equip and Support State Militia.

SENATE ARRAIGNED IN HOUSE

BURTON OF OHIO ACCUSES IT OF RECKLESS EXTRAVAGANCE

Swelling the Appropriation Bills and Says the House Should Call a Halt Bowers of Mississippi Says House Conferees Are at Fault for Yielding.

WASHINGTON, May 25 .- The Senate was rraigned in the House to-day by Repreentative Burton of Ohio for reckless extravagance in swelling the totals of appropriation bills sent to it by the House. He contrasted the authority and practice of the upper body in this respect with that of the British House of Lords, which is obliged to go to the Commons for appropriations for its own clerical force, and evoked great applause by declaring that the House, being charged with the duty of providing for the revenue of the country, should have control of the country's expenditures. "This is the evil in the system," Mr. Burton continued, "that another house, with different ideas and more readily reached by those who represent local or special interests, has unlimited right to add to all appropriation bills. Under the English system the upper house can only reject in toto. The same relation is maintained as between the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate in France. It is true there is no active sentiment in the country for economy, and there are powerful forces behind these numerous demands upon the behind these numerous demands upon the activities of the Government for divers undertakings which heretofore have been prosecuted by municipalities and States.

"It is not to be wondered at that with all these defects in our system, with the growing wealth of the country, with the demands everywhere for these extravagant expenditures the appropriations for the demands everywhere for these extravagant expenditures, the appropriations for the coming year should mount up to more than a billion dollars, but it is an impressive lesson to this House that we should call for a halt. [Loud applause.] The first place for action, as I maintain, is not in yielding the prerogatives of the House to the Senate." [Applause.]

Only Mr. Fitzgerald of New York had anything to say in response to Mr. Burton. He made party capital out of it. "The character of this Government is not likely to be changed over night," he said, "and the Republican party will hardly be able in this campaign to escape responsibility by complaining of the Constitution. The Senate is complaining that the House does not treat it with respect; that it sends legisnot treat it with respect; that it sends legis-lation here from year to year which receives no consideration. Before the Congress adjourns, a statement will be made showing just what this Congress has done in the way of appropriations, and then gentlemen will be calling to the mountains and rocks to fall on them and hide them from the wrath

Later, when the conference report on the Later, when the conference report on the general pension bill was up, Mr. Bowers of Mississippi gave the Senate another jolt. The Senate had rejected the proposition of the House to abolish the eighteen pension agencies, and the Republican House conferees had consented to that action.

"Will you," Mr. Bowers asked, "permit yourselves to be run over roughshod by the Senate?"

This Mr. Burleson took leave to doubt, expressing the opinion that if the House maintained its self-respect and rejected the report he had no doubt the Senate would recede.

"It is up to the individual Republicans." he said, "to save $400,000 of the people's mainey. If you fail to do so you cannot go to your constituents and justify your claim that you tried to prevent us less and extravagant appropriations."

BEVERIDGE IS GRILLED AGAIN !

TRIES TO PASS GOVERNMENT LIABILITY BILL,

But Is Prevented, First, by Reading of the Journal, Then by a Conference Report, Which With the Bill Was Read in Full, and Finally by a Motion to Adjourn

an old fashioned barbecue of Senator Beveridge of Indiana to-day, speaking in parliamentary language. After he was done brown he was sprinkled with garnishments that looked very much like Presidential policies. The Senatorfrom Indiana, having fared badly at the hands of the Senators in the night session of Saturday in his efforts to pass the Territorial omnibus bill, came to the Capitol this morning determined to get something done on the President's bill to compensate Government employees for injuries received in the line of their employment. Every precaution had been taken by Senator Aldrich and other Republican leaders to prevent any more legislation passing the Senate and thus delaying adjournment of Congress. To this end the reading in full of the journa of Saturday's proceedings was insisted upon. It was a long and carefully prepared record. It required nearly two hours to read it. Meanwhile the reading clerks took turns at it, perspiring freely, while Vice-President Fairbanks mopped his brow and manipulated a palm leaf fan. Senator Beveridge was plumed for a fight. That was very evident. He listened attentively to the reading of the journal for thirty minutes and then moved to dispense with the further reading. Senator pense with the further reading. Senator Kean of New Jersey objected. It was a new rôle of Mr. Kean. His regular daily duty under ordinary conditions, as unvarying as the duty of the chaplain, the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, in offering prayer, is to rise and move solemnly to "dispense with the further reading of the journal." Mr. Kean's interest in having the journal read was so intense to-day that even Senator Beveridge smiled.

"This journal is far too important to be skipped over," declared Mr. Kean disapprovingly as Mr. Beveridge moved to pass it up.

approvingly as Mr. Beveridge moved to pass it up.

At each turn of a quarter of an hour, as punctual as the cuckoo clock, Mr. Beveridge moved to lay aside the journal, but each time the request for unanimous consent was resisted by Senator Kean. But after two hours there was no more journal to read. The man who with scissors and paste and malice aforethought had constructed that journal had evidently fallen short of his assigned duty by three hours. Mr. Beveridge saw the parliamentary opening and started for it, but Senator Hale was there a few laps ahead of him with a privileged matter, a conference report on the sundry civil bill. Senator Aldrich suddenly showed more than his usual interest in the report.

"Let the bill be read in full," he demanded. "Read each separate item in the bill, so that we may take them up and consider them

we may take them up and consider them

"Read each separate item in the bill, so that we may take them up and consider them independently."

Senator Allison rose and innocently suggested: "Perhaps the Senator would like to have the report of the conference committee read also." Then he sat down with a smile.

"By all means." suggested Mr. Aldrich, beaming gratefully on the Iowa Senator.

"Read the report in full."

Mr. Beveridge sank back into his chair with an expression of sheer fatigue. Then there was a sham battle over the features of the conference report and volleys of blank cartridges were fired.

Just after 3 o'clock Mr. Beveridge sprang from his seat so suddenly and opportunely that he gained recognition from the Vice-President, He succeeded in calling up one of the President's pet measures, the Government employees' liability bill. Then a flerce debate ensued. It was so realistic at times that Mr. Beveridge looked as if he thought his colleagues meant it. There were constitutional questions galore. The fate of the bill seemed hanging by a thread. If somebody would only lift a little more! Mr. Beveridge tugged and perspired. Senator after Senator arose and explained how desirous he was of passing the bill if only, desirous he was of passing the bill if only,

Then Mr. Hale glided into the Senate again. He came as pussy approaches the cage of the canary. There was a crouch, a spring, a flutter, and all was over. A moa spring, a nutter, and all was over. A motion to adjourn did it.

Senator Beveridge took the hazing with a sort of good nature. Gathering up his scattered manuscripts, he smilingly warned his tormentors that he would be on hand when the Senate meets to-morrow.

BUREAU OF MINES AND MINING. Senator Dick Pulling Wires to Get House Bill Through the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 25 .- Senator Dick reported to the Senate to-day a bill from the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining creating a Bureau of Mines and Mining, to be attached to the Interior Department. This bill has passed the House and Senato Dick is pulling wires to get it through the Senate before adjournment. He will present a humanitarian argument for its immediate consideration.

"There were 2,300 lives lost in American "There were 2,300 lives lost in American mines last year, three times as many for each 1,000 employed as any country in Europe," Senator Dick said to-night in discussing the urgent nature of his bill. "We ought to do as well as Europe, and by scientific investigation and the application of the knowledge gained we can do so. The waste of mineral resources by improper mining methods is estimated at $300,000,000 to $500,000,000, much of which can be saved. The waste in coal alone is $200,000,000 annually." Senator Dick believes the problem can be solved by the proposed Bureau of Mines and Mining.

YALE GETS BLOUNT BEQUEST.

Pacifali Probate Court Upholds Will Hereford Miser—8468,000 Plum.

Fuller of Cambridge University, who attended Blount until his death, testifled that Blount knew perfectly what he was doing when he made the will.

The Judge pronounced for the will, which vas admitted to probate.

Blount was 67 years old at the time of his death. He owned a large estate in Here-fordshire, and it is this property which will now go to Yale.

A few months before his death Blount went to a boarding house in an inexpensive district on the west side of London. He represented himself to be very poor and his shabby appearance bore out his story. On the strength of his assumed poverty he obtained a reduced rate. He was known to the other lodgers as a quiet old man of retiring habits and a trifle eccentric. He received no callers and repelled all ad-received no callers and repelled all advances. His two nieces called at one time during his last illness, but he gave orders after their departure that they should not be admitted again.

His willing his property to Yale caused surprise, as he had been known to express intense dislike of America and of Americans and never displayed the least interest in the university. His resolve to leave his property to it was not sudden, however. Fully ten years ago, according to President Hadley, the initial correspondence between Blount and the university authorities took Blount and the university authorities tool place. At that time Blount wrote to the place. At that time Blount wrote to the university secretary, saying that he had taken great interest in the work being done at New Haven and desired to inquire as to the institution's needs. His interest kept up during the years following, the university officers say, and they fully expected that he would leave a bequest, although they had no idea that the amount would be large.

The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, secretary of the university, said some time ago that Blount began corresponding with the university as far back as 1898. In the year following he submitted a draft of his will following he submitted a draft of his will to the university treasurer for approval, although the amount bequeathed was not stated. In 1907 Blount wrote that he was considering the making of his contemplated gift in his lifetime. REBUKE FOR JACKSON. While He Is Fiddling With an Election Case Defendant's Ball Is Forfetted. Justice Goff took occasion yesterday to rebuke Attorney-General Jackson in the case of Cornelius J. Smallen, secretary of the Minnetonka Club in the Nineteenth Assembly district, of which James Ahearn is the Tammany leader. Smallen was indicted for attempting to abet illegal registration and tried twice. The first time the jury disagreed and the second time Smallen was acquitted. That was last week and Deputy Attorney-General Palmieri an-nounced then that he would put Smallen on trial for aiding and abetting illegal registration in the same case in which he had been acquitted of attempting to abet it. The case was called yesterday before Justice Goff, and Terence J. McManus, counsel for Smallen, appeared and said that counsel for Smallen, appeared and said that Attorney-General Jackson had agreed to a postponement of the trial for a month. Mr. Jackson's deputy, Palmieri, then surprised everybody by taking issue with his boss. He read three letters which he said he received on Saturday. One was from McManus, who said he was out of the case. The other was from Olcott, Gruber, Bonynge & McManus, which said that the Attorney-General had agreed to a postponement. Mr. Palmieri also produced a letter which he said the Attorney-General had sent to him, saying that he had agreed to have Smallen's trial put over.

Justice Goff said there was a special jury present and he wasn't going to let the case

MORE OMNIBUS LEGISLATION. House Passes a Bill Containing Eight Separate Measures.

WASHINGTON, May 25. - An omnibus bill comprising eight separate measures amending the navigation laws in so many respects was passed by the House of Representatives to-day practically without ob jection.

The law is repealed requiring vessels to keep lists of their passengers on routes of less than three hundred miles on inland coasts. This is intended to relieve such lines as the Albany Day Line. A count of passengers only must be taken hereafter on the short run steamship lines.

The omnibus bill also carries the Depew-Parsons bill governing the transportation by scows of garbage and reufuse out of New York to the sea. Of this the committee says in their report:

York to the sea. Of this the committee says in their report:

"This section serves two useful purposes, (1), The protection of unguarded lives on these scows in the harbor and bay of New York, and (2), it decreases the danger of collisions between tows of these scows or barges and incoming or outgoing steamers. The sea borne traffic of New York is growing so rapidly and the water area is so restricted that the commercial value of the land and every reasonable measure must be taken to secure safe navigation.

A great reception was accorded to M Fallières upon his arrival in London. King Edward, the Prince of Wales, Prime Minister Asquith and Foreign Minister Grey met him at the Victoria station, where a guard of honor was drawn up, and a band played "The Marseillaise." The King and Prince of Wales and M. Fallières drove in a four horse landau to St. James's Palace, where the President of France will reside during his stay in England.

The route from the railway station to the palace was lined with crowds, who cheered M. Fallières heartily. Later M. GRAPE NUTS.

DR. TALKS OF FOOD. Pres. of Board of Health.

"What shall I eat?" is the daily inquiry the physician is met with. I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment a large percentage of disease is caused by poorly selected and improperly prepared food. My personal experience with the fully cooked food, known as Grape-Nuts, enables me to speak freely of its merits.

"From overwork, I suffered several years with malnutrition, palpitation of the heart. and loss of sleep. Last summer I was led to experiment personally with the new food, which I used in conjunction with good rich cow's milk. In a short time after I commenced its use, the disagreeable symptoms disappeared, my heart's action became steady and normal, the functions of the stomach were properly carried out and I again slept as soundly and as well as in my youth.

"I look upon Grape-Nuts as a perfect food, and no one can gainsay but that it has a most prominent place in a rational, scientific system of feeding. Any one who uses this food will soon be convinced of the scundness of the principle upon which it is manufactured and may thereby know the facts as to its true worth." WHITE PARK SOLD BY SHERIFF. . II. O ppenheim Buys Place Once Owned by John A. Mc Call.

Long Branch, N. J., May 25 .- White Park. ormerly the property of the late John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance Company, passed into the hands of Myren H. Oppenheim of New York this afternoon. Mr. Oppenheim bought the place at Sheriff's sale, paying $108,000 above the $100,000 claim of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

The life insurance company foreclosed several months ago, but the sale was held up by a restraining order granted to Mr. Oppenheim, P. Sanford Ross and others, who held a second mortgage against the property. The order was vacated last week, when it was reported that Abraham White, the present occupant of the place, had made arrangements to settle both claims. Mr.

arrangements to settle both claims. Mr. White was present at the sale to-day. Mr. Oppenheim said to-night that unless Mr. White redeemed the property within a reasonable time it was the intention of those who held the second mortgage to lay out a bungalow colony, using the mansion as a casino.

"We intend to give Mr. White a chance," said he. "If he wants the place and can raise the money within a given time, all right; if not we will develop the property."
